What a Trip

Supermodel Bar Refaeli explores the quirky sides of American life by Jeff Iorio

SLAM POET RIVES MIGHT HAVE THE best job in the world. No, not being a slam poet (is that actually a job?), but rather driving Israeli Sports Illustrated swimsuit staple Bar Refaeli, 23, around in Tommy Hilfinger Presents Ironi Iconic America. Between bites of Philly cheesesteaks and views of the Pacific Palisades, Leonardo DiCaprio's girlfriend learned a thing or two about U.S. culture and life on the road—and also what she wishes she had packed.

A Corsage: Hanging out with girls getting ready for a prom in New Jersey was "the most 'American' experience. In Israel, we don't have such a thing as prom. But I remember teen movies from my childhood that were all about the big prom day."

Whipped Cream: "I liked the history of Serendipity 3 in New York—Andy Warhol and Marilyn Monroe went there. I had a $1,000 sundae—which is ice cream covered in 24k edible gold leaf but no whipped cream.

Buffalo Repellent: "I would never go to see the buffaloes on Catalina Island again—they are dirty and mean!"

A Wedding Planner: Because a Las Vegas wedding chapel isn't going to cut it. "People like it because it's spontaneous, but I'm curious to know the percentage of people who got married at one that got divorced!"
